7	"Caged Bird" – A Brief Note of Appreciation The lines from "Caged Bird" by Maya Angelou present the contrasting experiences of two birds. The free bird flies freely in the open sky, enjoying the beauty of nature. It "leaps on the back of the wind," "floats downstream," and "dips his wing in the orange sun rays," showing its freedom and confidence. In contrast, the caged bird lives in a "narrow cage" and can only stalk behind the "bars of rage." Its wings are clipped and feet are tied, symbolizing the oppression and restrictions faced by some people. The poem contains vivid imagery, such as "orange sun rays" and "narrow cage," which help readers clearly imagine the two different worlds. The poet also uses sparingly rhyming words like "wind – wing" and alliteration, for example "seldom see" which add rhythm and musical quality to the poem. Through the extended metaphor of a caged bird and a free bird, the poet expresses the theme of the universal longing for freedom. The message of the poem is that freedom is a basic human right, and even when people are oppressed, their hope and desire for freedom cannot be silenced.	4

11 (A)	Thursday, 12 March 2026 Today is a memorable day in my life. I visited the "Village of the Watermills". What a beautiful place! The village is full of trees, flowers, streams and ponds. Everywhere the sound of the streams and watermills. I was surprised to see how simply the villagers live. They love and respect Mother Nature. Though they are poor, they are happy and satisfied. They have no worries of busy city life. I also saw some children placing flowers on a rock near the bridge. An old man told me that a traveller who died long ago was buried there. They place flowers on the stone to honour him. I felt great respect for their kindness. This visit taught me a lesson. A simple life close to nature brings real happiness. I wish everyone could learn from this village.	4

11 (B)	Grace Home Gandhi Street Kochi 12 March 2026 Dear Jim and Della, I am a Class 8 student from Kerala. I am writing this letter to say how deeply your story touched me. In a selfish world of today, your actions show the true meaning of love. Della, you sold your beautiful hair to buy a gold chain for Jim's watch. Jim, you sold your gold watch to buy the lovely combs Della wanted. Both of you gave up your most valued things to make the other happy. When you exchanged the gifts, you could not use them. But that did not matter. Your love and sacrifice made the gifts truly special. Your story teaches us that real love is caring for others. With love and admiration, Grace SK
12 (A)	From: sendersemail@email.com To: receiversemail@email.com Subject: Congratulations on Your Bravery and Achievements Dear Malala Yousafzai, I am a Class 8 student from Kerala. I am writing this email to say that your life story has greatly inspired me. Your courage and determination to fight for girls' education are truly admirable. Even when you faced threats and the terrible attack on your school bus, you did not give up. Your words, "One child, one teacher, one book and one pen can change the world," give hope to students everywhere. Thank you for speaking up for millions of girls who are denied the chance to go to school. Your actions show that even young people can bring change in the world. Congratulations on your great achievements, including the Nobel Peace Prize. You are a true inspiration to my generation. With great respect and best regards, Grace SK	4

13 (A)	A Lesson of Kindness The picture shows a scene from the story "Thank You, Ma'am" by Langston Hughes. In the image, Mrs. Luella Bates Washington Jones is kindly serving a meal to a young boy named Roger. Mrs. Jones is a large, strong woman who has a kind heart. Even though Roger tried to steal her purse, she did not hand him over to the police. Instead, she took him to her home to wash his face and feed him. The picture shows them sitting at a table together, like a Mom serving food to her child. This picture captures the theme of kindness and trust. It shows that Mrs. Jones wants to teach Roger "right from wrong" through love instead of punishment.	4
13 (B)	India Awakes to a New Era of Freedom By Staff reporter; 16 August 1947 New Delhi: India stepped into a new era of freedom as Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru delivered his historic “Tryst with Destiny” speech to the Constituent Assembly last midnight. In his inspiring speech, Nehru said that India was awakening to “life and freedom” after many years of struggle. He reminded the people that freedom brings great responsibility. He urged the citizens of India to work together to build a strong and united nation. Nehru also spoke about the need to end poverty, ignorance, and inequality in the country. The Prime Minister called upon all Indians to join hands with confidence to build a peaceful and prosperous India. His powerful words filled the nation with hope and pride.

14	Jawaharlal Nehru (1889 – 1964) Jawaharlal Nehru was a great leader of the Indian independence movement and was the first Prime Minister of independent India.
